FURTHER DEVELOPMENT OF AGRICULTURE WILL MEAN MORE PROSPERITY

Robstown, Texas, is going to prosper. It has had a rapid growth during its short history and is the center of a rich agricultural region, which is said to be one of the richest in the south of San Antonio. The cotton industry has grown from a few hundred bales ten years ago to over 10,000 bales in 1918 and it is fully expected that 15,000 bales will be grown this year. If crop conditions continue favorable.

The cotton industry alone is said to be sufficient to assure the future of Robstown, but it has other natural advantages. Truck farming can be profitably followed. It has been found, and as the amount of land each person can use is small, there should be a closely settled rural district in the future.

The country is young agriculturally speaking and the vitality of the soil has not been sapped away. It is variously estimated that only from 25 to 40 per cent of the land within five miles of Robstown is under actual cultivation and as practically all of it can be farmed, it is asserted that the time will soon come when all will be highly fertile.

Robstown was laid out in August, 1907, and in March, 1908, an amalgamated mine was laid. The town was named after Robert DeLoach, who was added to the first part of its name, as may be easily seen. The development of the city is due primarily to the coming of the St. Louis, Rock Island and Missouri railroad in 1904.
